

MyGurukul

SACRED WISDOM — SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 2026

SACRED TEXT

*pravṛttau vā nivṛttau vā naiva dhīrasya durgrahaḥ |
yadā yatkartumāyāti tatkrtvā tiṣṭhataḥ sukham || 18|20||*

— Aṣṭāvakra-gītā, Prakaraṇa 18 (Chapter 18), Verse 20

GURU'S INTERPRETATION

The essence of wisdom, according to Ashtavakra, lies in effortless action. This verse speaks of a sage, a "dhira," who isn't caught in the trap of choosing between action ("pravṛttau") and inaction ("nivṛttau"). For such a realized soul, there's no difficult decision to make. They simply act as the moment dictates, flowing with life's current. The key is "yadā yatkartumāyāti tatkrtvā tiṣṭhataḥ sukham" – whatever comes naturally to be done, they do it, and then they rest in peace.

This isn't about impulsivity, but rather about a deep understanding that arises from self-realization. When you are grounded in your true nature, you are no longer driven by egoic desires or fears. Your actions become spontaneous expressions of your inner being, aligned with the universal flow. There is no struggle, no resistance, only effortless participation in the dance of life.

In our modern world, we are often bombarded with choices and expectations. We are told we must constantly strive, achieve, and accumulate. This can lead to a state of perpetual anxiety and dissatisfaction. But the wisdom of Ashtavakra offers a different path: to cultivate inner stillness, to connect with your true Self, and to act from that place of authenticity. This means paying attention to what arises within you naturally, without judgment or resistance. It means trusting your intuition and allowing yourself to be guided by the present moment. Are you facing a difficult decision at work? Instead of overthinking, pause, breathe, and connect with your inner wisdom. What feels right? What resonates with your deepest values? Trust that answer and act accordingly. This verse reminds us that true happiness isn't found in endless striving, but in effortless being.

REFLECTION FOR TODAY

How can you cultivate a deeper connection with your inner wisdom today, so that your actions flow more effortlessly from a place of peace and authenticity?