

MyGurukul

SACRED WISDOM — SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 2026

SACRED TEXT

bhaktyā muktiḥ katham bhūyād bhukter muktiḥ sudurlabhā | BRP136.027.1
jātā ced dehinām muktiḥ kim anyena prayojanam || 27 || BRP136.027.2
bhaktyā muktiḥ sarvapūjyā tām iccheyam jaganmaya || 28 || BRP136.028.1
etad evāntaram brahman dīyate mām anusmaran | BRP136.029.1
brāhmaṇāyāthavārthibhyas tad evākṣayatām vrajet || 29 || BRP136.029.2

— Brahmapurāṇa, Chapter 136: Maudgalya and Viṣṇu (Chapter 136), Verse 1

GURU'S INTERPRETATION

The essence of these verses from the Brahmapurāṇa, specifically the conversation between Maudgalya and Viṣṇu, revolves around the path to liberation (mukti) and the importance of devotion (bhakti). The initial query emphasizes the challenge of attaining liberation through worldly enjoyments (bhukti), highlighting that liberation is exceedingly rare when sought through material means. If liberation were truly attainable through satisfying worldly desires, then what further purpose would life hold?

Viṣṇu clarifies that liberation achieved through devotion is the most revered path, the one to be earnestly desired. He reveals a profound secret: that offering something while remembering Him (anusmaran) creates an eternal connection. Whether the offering is given to a Brahmin or to those in need, its merit becomes inexhaustible. This act of selfless giving, imbued with devotion, transcends the limitations of karma and plants the seeds for ultimate freedom.

This ancient wisdom holds profound relevance for your modern life. We are often caught in the pursuit of happiness through external achievements and material possessions. The Brahmapurāṇa reminds you that true and lasting liberation isn't found in fleeting pleasures, but in cultivating devotion and selfless service. Even small acts of kindness, performed with a mindful remembrance of the divine, accumulate spiritual merit and purify your heart. Instead of solely focusing on personal gain, consider how your actions can benefit others and contribute to the well-being of the world. By integrating devotion into your daily life, you begin to walk the path towards genuine liberation, a path illuminated by love, compassion, and selfless action.

REFLECTION FOR TODAY

How can you consciously infuse your daily actions with devotion, transforming mundane tasks into opportunities for spiritual growth and selfless service?