

MyGurukul

SACRED WISDOM — SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 2026

SACRED TEXT

yadā sarvatra nirmuktaḥ kāmo nāsyā hṛdi sthitaḥ d yadā satyānvito vṛttaistadā brahma sama śnute e suprasannastu bhāvena yogena ca narādhipa d dharmaṃ puruṣaśārdūla prāpsyase pālāne rataḥ e vedādhyayanaśīlānāṃ viprāṇāṃ sādhu karmaṇāṃ d pālāne yatnamātiṣṭha sarvalokasya cānagha e

— 600000 (Chapter 12), Verses 38-40

GURU'S INTERPRETATION

It speaks of liberation from desires, a state where yearning no longer resides within your heart. This isn't about suppressing desires, but rather transcending them, understanding their transient nature and not allowing them to dictate your actions. When you are established in truthfulness, not merely in words but in your conduct, your actions align with dharma, then you become eligible to experience the oneness with Brahman.

The passage emphasizes cultivating a pure and joyful disposition. This inner clarity, achieved through both sincere devotion (bhava) and dedicated spiritual practice (yoga), is crucial for attaining dharma. This dharma isn't just about rituals, it is about righteous living, fulfilling your responsibilities, and upholding moral principles. The verse speaks directly to rulers, encouraging them to be diligent in protecting and nurturing the virtuous, those dedicated to Vedic study and righteous deeds, and to ensure the well-being of all beings.

In modern life, this wisdom resonates deeply. We are constantly bombarded with desires fueled by consumerism and societal pressures. The Mahabharata gently reminds you to cultivate inner contentment, to seek fulfillment not in external possessions or fleeting pleasures, but within yourself. Truthfulness in your dealings, both personal and professional, becomes the bedrock of your character. The call to protect the virtuous translates to supporting those who contribute positively to society, those who uphold ethical values, and those who dedicate themselves to serving others. This doesn't necessarily mean protecting the powerful, but rather creating a space for goodness to flourish. By prioritizing inner peace, truthfulness, and selfless service, you embark on the path to realizing your own potential and contributing to a more harmonious world.

REFLECTION FOR TODAY

In what small ways can I embody truthfulness and selfless service in my daily interactions, and how might these actions lead to a deeper sense of inner peace?