

MyGurukul

SACRED WISDOM — SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 2026

SACRED TEXT

mohādadharmaṃ yaḥ kṛtvā punaḥ samanutapyate d manaḥsamādhisaṃyukto na sa seveta duṣkṛtaṃ e [yathāyathā manastasya duṣkṛtaṃ karma garhate d tathātathā śarīraṃ tu tenādharmeṇa mucyate e yadi vyāharate rājanviprāṇāṃ dharmavādinām d tato'dharmakṛtātākṣipramapavādātpramucyate ॥

— 6970811 (Chapter 13), Verses 4-6

GURU'S INTERPRETATION

The verses from the Mahabharata speak of redemption and the power of repentance. They tell us that if someone, driven by delusion, commits a wrong act but then genuinely regrets it with a focused mind, they should avoid repeating that mistake. The intensity of your remorse directly correlates with the cleansing of the karmic stain on your being. As your mind increasingly despises the wrongful deed, your body, and indeed your entire self, becomes liberated from the burden of that 'OM.

This liberation isn't merely a passive process. The passage further suggests actively seeking counsel from wise individuals, especially those versed in dharma. By openly confessing your transgressions to such learned people, you can expedite the process of purification. The act of vocalizing your remorse and seeking guidance allows for a faster release from the negative consequences of your actions.

In our modern lives, this ancient wisdom holds profound relevance. We all stumble, we all make choices we later regret. The key lies not in dwelling in self-pity or denial, but in acknowledging our errors and committing to a different path. Genuine repentance, fuelled by a sincere desire for change, becomes the engine of transformation. Seeking guidance from trusted mentors, therapists, or spiritual advisors can provide invaluable support in navigating the complexities of moral repair. It is about taking responsibility and actively working towards self-improvement. The verses underline the importance of self-awareness, the power of remorse, and the healing potential of seeking wisdom from others. Ultimately, this passage encourages you to embrace your imperfections, learn from your mistakes, and strive towards a more virtuous existence. It's a message of hope, reminding us that redemption is always within reach, provided we are willing to embark on the journey of self-reflection and sincere repentance.

REFLECTION FOR TODAY

In what specific area of your life could you apply the principle of remorse and active seeking of wise counsel to move towards greater personal integrity and peace?