

MyGurukul

SACRED WISDOM — SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 2026

SACRED TEXT

*abhayaṃ satvasaṃsuddhirjñānayogavyavasthitiḥ d
dānaṃ damaśca yajñaśca svādhyāyastapa ārjavam e ahiṃsā satyamakrodhastyāgaḥ śāntirapaiśunam d dayā bhūteṣvalolutvaṃ mārdavaṃ hrīracāpalam e*

— Bhagavad Gita (Chapter 6), Verses 1-2

GURU'S INTERPRETATION

These verses from the Mahabharata, spoken by Krishna, outline the divine qualities that lead to spiritual liberation, a state free from fear and filled with profound peace. The passage begins with abhayaṃ, fearlessness, not just physical courage but a deep inner security rooted in the understanding of your true nature as divine. This fearlessness arises from satvasaṃsuddhiḥ, purity of mind, a clarity achieved by removing mental impurities like ego, attachments, and desires. It is further strengthened by jñānayogavyavasthitiḥ, steadfastness in the yoga of knowledge, meaning consistent effort in understanding and realizing the ultimate truth through contemplation and study.

The path continues with dānaṃ, selfless giving, not only of material possessions but also of your time, energy, and knowledge. Damaśca, self-control, the ability to restrain your senses and mind from wandering towards negativity, is crucial. Yajñaśca, sacrifice, represents offering your actions and desires to a higher purpose, transcending selfish motivations. Svādhyāyastapa ārjavam, self-study, austerity, and straightforwardness, encourage introspection, disciplined practice, and honesty in your dealings with yourself and others.

The second verse delves deeper into ethical conduct. Ahiṃsā, non-violence, extends beyond physical harm to encompass thoughts and words. Satyam, truthfulness, is not just speaking the truth but living it in every aspect of your life. Akrodha, absence of anger, signifies cultivating patience and forgiveness. Tyāgaḥ, renunciation, means detachment from the fruits of your actions, performing your duties without attachment to the outcome. Śāntirapaiśunam, peacefulness and absence of fault-finding, create a harmonious inner and outer environment. Dayā bhūteṣu, compassion for all beings, acknowledges the interconnectedness of all life. Alolutvaṃ, freedom from greed, promotes contentment. Mārdavaṃ hrīracāpalam, gentleness, modesty, and absence of fickleness, foster humility and stability.

In modern life, these qualities offer a roadmap for navigating the complexities of our world with grace and wisdom. Practicing these virtues can transform your relationships, career, and inner life, leading to a more fulfilling and meaningful existence. By cultivating these divine attributes, you move closer to realizing your inherent divinity and experiencing lasting peace.

REFLECTION FOR TODAY

How can you embody one of these divine qualities more fully in your actions today, and what impact might that have on your inner peace and your relationships with others?