

MyGurukul

SACRED WISDOM — SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 2026

SACRED TEXT

svakarmanī dvijas tiṣṭhed vṛttim āhārayet kṛtām | 18.048a

nāsadbhyaḥ pratigrhṇīyād varṇebhyo niyame 'sati || 48 || 18.048c

aśucir vacanād yasya śucir bhavati puruṣaḥ | 18.049a

śuciś caivāśuciḥ sadyaḥ kathaṁ rājā na daivatam || 49 || 18.049c

— Nāradaśmṛti, Chapter 17, Verse 1

GURU'S INTERPRETATION

The Nāradaśmṛti guides you toward a life lived with integrity and purpose. These verses speak to the responsibilities of the twice-born, the initiated, urging them to sustain themselves through honest labor, adhering to their dharma. It cautions against accepting gifts from those who are not righteous, especially when ethical principles are compromised. This isn't merely about financial transactions; it's about safeguarding your spiritual well-being by avoiding association with negativity and corruption. The essence lies in maintaining purity, not just outwardly, but within your thoughts and actions.

Imagine the ripple effect of your choices. Accepting ill-gotten gains, even with good intentions, taints your energy and contributes to a cycle of imbalance. The text then presents a powerful analogy: if words alone can purify or defile, how much more potent is the influence of a ruler, a leader? The king, representing authority, is likened to a divine force, capable of shaping the moral landscape of the realm. This emphasizes the immense responsibility that comes with power.

In modern life, this translates to choosing ethical employment, supporting businesses with integrity, and being mindful of the sources of your income. It means being discerning about the information you consume and the relationships you cultivate. Are you surrounding yourself with positivity, or are you passively accepting negativity into your life? Are you contributing to a system that upholds righteousness, or are you inadvertently supporting corruption? The "king" might be your boss, your government, or even the media you consume. Question the influences that shape your perspective and strive to align yourself with truth and virtue. Remember that every choice, no matter how small, has a consequence. Your actions contribute to the collective energy of the world.

REFLECTION FOR TODAY

What small act of integrity can you commit today to positively impact your own life and the lives of those around you, thereby honoring the divine within?