

MyGurukul

SACRED WISDOM — SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 2026

SACRED TEXT

*brahma-varcasa-kāmas tu yajeta brahmaṇaḥ patim |
indram indriya-kāmas tu prajā-kāmaḥ prajāpatim | | [BhP 2.3.2]
akāmaḥ sarva-kāmo vā mokṣa-kāma udāra-dhīḥ |
tīvreṇa bhakti-yogena yajeta puruṣaṁ param | | [BhP 2.3.10]*

— Bhagavadgītā-4comm with the commentaries of Śrīdhara, Madhusūdana, Viśvanātha and Baladeva, Chapter 1, Verse 1

GURU'S INTERPRETATION

These verses from the Bhagavad Gītā, though not directly within the battlefield narrative, offer profound insight into the motivations behind our actions and the path to liberation. They speak of different forms of worship and the desires that fuel them. The first verse highlights how those seeking specific worldly boons, such as spiritual potency, sensory gratification, or progeny, may direct their devotion to particular deities like Brahma, Indra, or Prajapati. Essentially, it acknowledges that our prayers often reflect our desires.

The second verse, however, elevates the conversation. It speaks to those with a broader vision, the "udāra-dhīḥ," the noble-minded. Whether you are free from desires, overflowing with them, or yearning for liberation (moksha), the verse points to a single, supreme object of devotion: the Param Purusham, the Supreme Person. The key is the intensity, "tīvreṇa," of your bhakti-yoga, your devotional connection. This isn't about passively going through the motions; it's about a fervent, heartfelt dedication.

In modern life, we are constantly bombarded with desires, subtly encouraged to seek fulfillment through external achievements and possessions. These verses remind you to examine the root of your actions. Are you driven by fleeting desires or a deeper yearning for connection with something greater than yourself? The path of bhakti-yoga, of intense devotion, offers a way to transcend the limitations of your ego and experience the boundless love and joy that reside within. It invites you to redirect your focus from the temporary to the eternal, from the superficial to the profound. Through sincere devotion, you can find liberation from the endless cycle of desire and attain lasting peace.

REFLECTION FOR TODAY

What desires are currently driving your actions, and how can you infuse your daily life with "tīvreṇa bhakti-yogena," intense devotion, to connect with the Purusham Param, the Supreme Person within?