

MyGurukul

SACRED WISDOM — SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 2026

SACRED TEXT

evamastvityumā procya tām devīm pradadau sutām |
mṛtyustvamiti so 'pyuktṛvā ghore karmaṇyayojayat |
sarvaprāṇabhṛtām devīm prāṇāpaharaṇe śubhām || 198 ||
sāpi tatkāryakaraṇe niyuktā brahmaṇā svayam |
† udvavāha sadeveśā sadodyuktā tvayā mayā† || 199 ||
----- |
----- || 200 ||

— Skandapurāṇa, Chapter 32, Verses 198-200

GURU'S INTERPRETATION

These verses from the Skandapurāṇa, though brief, offer a profound glimpse into the cosmic dance of life and death, personified through divine figures. Umā, another name for Parvati, grants her daughter to Death, who is also called Mrityu. Death, in turn, assigns her to the grim task of claiming the life force of all living beings. This might seem harsh, but it's crucial to understand the cyclical nature of existence in Hindu cosmology. Brahma himself confirms her role, further solidifying the divine orchestration of this seemingly tragic duty.

The second verse states that "she married, was always ready, by you, by me." This suggests a universal participation in the process of death and rebirth. "You" and "me" potentially refer to all beings, emphasizing that we are all intrinsically linked to this cycle. Death is not an external force, but an integral part of the continuous unfolding of reality.

How does this apply to your life today? It challenges the common fear of death, urging you to see it not as an end, but as a necessary transition. Every ending paves the way for a new beginning. Just as the seasons change, life too ebbs and flows. Accepting this impermanence allows you to live more fully in the present moment, appreciating the preciousness of each breath. It encourages you to release your attachments to things that are transient, focusing instead on cultivating inner peace and wisdom. This understanding fosters compassion, as you recognize the shared vulnerability of all beings facing the same ultimate reality.

The verses remind you that even difficult or seemingly negative aspects of life, like grief, loss, and hardship, are part of a larger, divinely ordained process. Embracing these experiences can lead to profound growth and a deeper understanding of yourself and the universe. By accepting the role of death in the grand tapestry of existence, you can find liberation from fear and live with greater intention, purpose, and gratitude.

REFLECTION FOR TODAY

Can you find peace in knowing that endings are simply the necessary precursors to new beginnings, and how might this perspective shift your approach to life's inevitable changes?