SACRED TEXT

*eko 'py anekarūpaś ca sthūlasūkṣmo laghur guruḥ |
nirvāṇapadamārūḍho deveśoyam ihocyate ||31||*

— Yogapradīpa, Chapter 1, Verse 31

GURU'S INTERPRETATION

The essence of the Divine, the “deveśa,” is unveiled in this verse, a multifaceted jewel reflecting the totality of existence. It speaks to the paradoxical nature of ultimate reality, the Supreme Being that is both one and yet manifests in countless forms. Think of the ocean: seemingly singular, yet composed of infinite drops, each unique and interconnected. This is the same principle at play here. The Divine is the underlying unity, the singular source from which all multiplicity arises.

The verse further emphasizes the Divine's presence in both the gross (sthūla) and subtle (sūkṣma). It's not just about grand, cosmic events, but also the quiet whispers within your own heart, the intricate dance of your breath. Every particle of creation, every thought, every feeling, carries the imprint of the Divine. To truly understand this, you must train your awareness to recognize the sacred in the mundane, the extraordinary within the ordinary.

The qualities of lightness (laghu) and heaviness (guru) also belong to the Divine. This highlights the dynamic nature of existence. There is lightness in joy, in effortless flow, but also the grounding weight of responsibility, of deep contemplation. Both are necessary, both are embraced by the Divine. Accepting this duality allows you to navigate life's inevitable ups and downs with greater equanimity.

Finally, the verse mentions "nirvāṇapadamārūḍho," the state of liberation. This is the ultimate goal of yogic practice, the transcendence of suffering and the realization of one's true nature. It's not a destination “out there,” but rather an unveiling of the inherent divinity within. By understanding the multifaceted nature of the Divine, as described in this verse, you are already taking steps on that path. In your daily life, seek the unity within the diversity, the subtle within the gross, the lightness within the heaviness, and you will find yourself drawing closer to that state of ultimate freedom. The Divine isn't some far-off entity; it's the very fabric of your being.

REFLECTION FOR TODAY

How can you recognize and embrace the seemingly contradictory aspects of life, knowing that they are all expressions of the Divine?
